Keynote Speaker | Implementation Psychologist |
Global Safety II Specialist

An implementation psychologist with an obsession for deconstructing the practice of thinking for the betterment of humankind.

ABOUT JONATHAN

With a core focus on high risk environments and a global client base, Jonathan Lincolne is an experienced speaker with the runs on the board when it comes to speaking and facilitating, and getting people to believe they can do better today than they did yesterday.

For nearly 20 years Jonathan has taught human thinking skills as a precursor to other topics such as how to think more effectively to be more safe, to be a better leader, to be a better innovator. It was only recently that a long standing client asked Jonathan to just deliver the thinking skills training - and let people apply it to their lives.

Realising the information became infinitely more valuable when you let people apply it to the areas of life of the most importance to them create a watershed moment for Jonathan – and the birth of Thinkology. In Jonathan's own words - Thinkology deconstructs the mystery of how we think, and translates that into a set of skills that can be learned, practiced and mastered.

Committed to teaching people how to think more effectively to enhance performance, Jonathan Lincolne is a clinical psychologist with degrees in religion, philosophy and Human-Centred Design. He consults, advises and trains across a diverse range of topics including high-risk safety, high-value teaming, innovation, emerging & executive leadership and Company Board effectiveness.

Over the last 20 years, Jonathan has designed and delivered programs in 57 countries for clients including Virgin Atlantic and Virgin Galactic, Boeing, Rio Tinto, BHP and ANZ Private Bank. He was the founder of safety company Sentis and the designer of their flagship program - which has been presented to over 250,000 people globally and translated into 5 language – and took up the role as Design-Thinking mentor for the Australian Federal Government from 2012-2016.

KEYNOTES

THINKOLOGY – THINKING, BUT NOT AS YOU KNOW IT

This frenetic rip through the way that we think is a powerful message guaranteed to take your audience swiftly and deeply into examining just why understanding how to 'systemise' their thinking will improve their work, their business, and their life. Driven by a need to improve human kind, Jonathan Lincolne has drawn on his work in front line, high risk environments in more than 57 countries, to create what he calls the most necessary perspective on this planet; the body of work that should be known as the science of thinking. Motivational, inspirational, with quick insights and simple strategies that will rock the way your audience thinks – changing their world with just one question, in just one moment.

HIGH PERFORMANCE TEAMING

The most persistent concept in human kind is that of the tribe, and in our fast-moving world the strongest of tribes now show up through high performance teams. Where vision is strong, values unite, crisis averted and trouble-shooting is perfected in the pursuit of doing better every single day. The desire for high performance teams permeates every one of our organisations in the western world – and in this rapid paced presentation Jonathan Lincolne deconstructs how he has worked with some of the world's greatest corporates to unlock the power in high performance teaming, convincing and then showing you that it is a process, it can be designed, and it is within the reach of anyone who is serious in their pursuit of high performance through the people surrounding them.

SAFETY II THROUGH HUMAN-CENTRED DESIGN

The world of work, particularly in high risk environments, is shifting rapidly, and within this the shift from Safety I to Safety II is paramount. Transition from a compliance driven, what went wrong approach, to a variable framework in which we start with what works has proven to be complex – relegating Safety II in most organisations to a theoretical, policy driven discussion which still attaches itself to the legacy of Safety I. An experienced Implementation Psychologist with demonstrated success in the implementation of Safety II in complex environments, Jonathan breaks down exactly how Human Centred Design is the only way to see through the Safety II evolution, and unlocks the power of Safety II implemented well.
